DE Myles Garrett took over as player captain for Chris Long Foundation's "Waterboys." Garrett then went on his first humanitarian trip to Tanzania as NFL captain of Waterboys, the cornerstone of the Chris Long Foundation that provides clean drinking water to impoverished communities in East Africa.

"I always feel like I had a passion for helping give water to underprivileged countries, towns, everywhere – not just overseas but here, too. It happens everywhere in the world," Garrett said. "When I entered the league, I had some maturing to do and some growing to do on the field. Once I was set in both walks of life, I could step up and take this kind of leadership role. Chris came to me before, but I wasn't ready. Now that we're both on the same page, it's now my turn to right the ship and take the leap."

Since its launch, Waterboys has funded over 65 wells serving more than 245,000 people. Roughly 844 million people around the world are without basic water access – more than twice the population of the United States.
